

Mioara Mandea is currently the Programme Manager for Solid Earth at the Earth Observation / Directorate for Innovation, Applications and Science at Centre National d'Etudes Spatiales Paris (French Space Agency). Over the last decades, she has been involved in many activities in the frame of the International Association of Geomagnetism and Aeronomy, European Geosciences Union, American Geophysical Union, International Space Science Institute, Commission for the Geological Map of the World, etc.

Mioara Mandea has published more than 200 papers (publications in ISI journals, further journals, books and chapters in books, proceedings and reports), and has been involved in organising many workshops and conferences. She has also led several multi-partner research projects or work packages within projects at the different national and EU levels. She has tutored PhD students from many countries around the world.

Mioara Mandea is member of the Academy of Romanian Scientists, Academia Europea, Académie Royale de Belgique. She received the International Award of AGU, the Petrus Peregrinus medal of EGU, and the prestigious French "Ordre National de Mérite".